THE TALL CORN — Joe Paul Mueck, irrigation farmer south of Cameron, stands amidst irrigated corn, now ready for harvesting. He and Herman Mueck, his brother, combined to enlarge with 10-inch aluminum pipe the irrigated operation in Salem Community. They have about 130 acres under irrigation, part of an estimated 10,000 acres of land irrigated at times in Milam County. One result is nine-foot corn during a dry summer. Water is by riparian right from Little River.

TWO-BALE COTTON — Here, Joe Mueck looks over a field of irrigated cotton he hopes will reach two bales per acre this season. It is almost waist high while unirrigated cotton is about knee level. Mueck said he put in additional fertilizers and minerals for increased yield. He has been averaging one and a half bales in this field. Water is pumped into an irrigation canal behind Mueck, and repumped into 10-inch pipe to water crops. Milam irrigation starts in the Bryant Station area on the Ed Senkel place, and includes land operated by the McClaren brothers, Dan McDaniel, John Fagan and the Reistinos. Most of the irrigation is along Little and Brazos Rivers. Investment is considerable.

OWEN ASSUMES PRESIDENCY OF LOCAL ROTARY

Barney Owen, plant manager of Cameron Coca Cola Bottling Co., Wednesday assumed the presidency of Cameron Rotary Club for the 1967-68 year.

He succeeds Frank M. Luecke, Herald editor-publisher, who continues as club vice-president under Cameron Rotary rules.

New directors are: Gus Elley, also bulletin editor; Archie Prokish; L. W. Stroup; Henry Litzman, also club secretary; and Dana Kestenbaum, who continues as treasurer.

Owen outlined his plans for the club for the new year, urging the Club's consideration of extending Rotary to other communities in District 587.

Cameron Rotary Club was chartered in 1938.

SCOUTS SERVE 500 TOURISTS AT REST STOP

Extending a welcome for the second year to motorists driving through Cameron on US77 and SH 36 were 15 members of Felix Matula's Scout troop 52. Drinks were furnished by the Coca Cola Bottling Co., Cameron and local merchants donated paper cups, signs and other incidentals. Scouts posted signs along the highway approaching the City Park. Their rest station was set-up under a large canopy.

Matula said about 500 motorists stopped at the park between 5 p.m. Monday and 5 p. m. Tuesday. "They really seemed to appreciate what the Boy Scouts were doing here and seemed glad to have a place to rest from the road", Matula said. He added that the troop was considering asking Chamber of Commerce help to sponsor the rest station next year. "With more adults to take turns staying up with the boys at night we could provide a tourist service both before and after the holiday," Matula said.

Drilling Starts At New Wildcat

Drilling continues at a steady pace in the north section of Milam County's new Milbur Field with one new wildcat set to spud on Thursday of last week by Production Enterprises of Houston.

This wildcat will be the company's No. 1 D. B. Roach, and was scheduled about a month ago. Location is on a 187 acre lease in the James Dunn Survey six miles southeast of Milano.

The Roach is permitted to 3,000 feet, but will be aiming for the Wilcox, the prolific oil producing formation in the new field.

The Production Enterprises wildcat also is located about 2,250 feet northeast of Luling Oil & Gas Company's No. 1 Joe Martin, the Wilcox discovery that opened the north Milbur Field, and some 3,000 feet north of the Ashland Oil & Refining Company No. 2 Blackburn - Trammell, newest producer brought in in the field.

An attempt to extend the new Milbur Field into Burleson County was announced Tuesday when two Austin operators, H. M. N. Corporation and W. P. Holloway, scheduled a 3,000 foot wildcat to be drilled in that area. The new test will be the No. 1 C. N. Avery, located on a 1,000 acre lease in Eliza Sante Survey about two and one-half miles southwest of the Milbur Field. Drillsite for the new wildcat is 5,100 feet southeast of an old dry hole drilled by Clark Oil and Refining Company and R. E. Smith on the same tract of land.

7 SITES SEE MULTI - UNITS, 2 NEW HOMES

Building permits in Cameron climbed dramatically with construction started on two triplexes on North Fannin, a duplex on North Jackson, and an annex to the St. Anthony School.

One city building permit was issued in May for the duplex on North Jackson for $21,900.

June permits totaled $100,877. Included in the June total was a permit for $47,000, covering interior work at St. Monica Church and the St. Anthony School annex; $40,000 for the two triplexes on North Fannin; and several private home additions and remodeling projects.

Other construction, not included in city building permits includes two brick homes on the Temple highway west of Cameron.

The houses, located on wooded sites, will adjoin the Richard Williams property. One house, being built by James Denio, is near completion and the B. F. Grimes home is expected to be completed by September 15.

SCHOOL ANNEX

Rev. John Geiser said acoustical plaster was being applied in the sanctuary at St. Monica Catholic Church and the interior would be repainted.

He said services were being held in the Parish Hall during the remodeling and added that they should be able to move back into the Church within a month.

Rev. Geiser said the school annex now under construction would house a science room, three classrooms, a teachers' lounge and office. It will be connected to the existing building by a lobby. This will become the new entrance to the school facing the church building.

The 185 to 190 student-body school has been using temporary classrooms in the Parish Hall for several years. Rev. Geiser said the exterior of the annex would be of a brick matching the present building. He said the new classrooms would be ready for use when school opens in September.

APARTMENT UNITS

Two triplexes between 20th and 21st Streets on North Fannin are being built by Charles Brady Jr., of Temple. They wil include 4 two-bedroom units and 2 one-bedroom units.

The all-brick triplexes will look like single family homes on the outside, One will be in a Spanish design and the other will be a Colonial style. They will have private patios at the back.

The triplexes are expected to be ready for occupancy in late September.

The buff-brick exterior duplex at North Jackson and 14½ Street will have two-bedroom units with modern kitchen, living rooms and baths.

It is being built by Wesley Duncan, of Granger, and should be completed by August 1.

GRAND JURY MEETS

Fifteen cases are scheduled for hearing when the Milam County Grand Jury meets at the courthouse Friday.

As policy, we don't run unsigned letters.

The point of the letter seemed to be that people talk boosting Cameron, but don't really.

That is less true than anytime in recent community history. Numerous projects are underway which culminate one at a time in better life here. They just are not news until they happen.

It is becoming hackneyed to say that some people shop out of town or that they move away for em-

PCT. 2 FIRETRUCK

VFD Meeting Tuesday

Commissioner Lavert McKinney this week advised The Herald that a used firetruck has been purchased for Milam Precinct 2 and that a volunteer precinct fire department wil be organized July 11.

He said the organizational meeting will be 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, July 11, for men interested in joining a Precinct 2 Fire Dept. It will be at Milam District Courtroom.

A used firetruck has been purchased from the City of Rosebud, McKinney said. New tires, siren and other minor changes are being put on the vehicle, which will be delivered July 26.

He said the vehicle will be housed in Precinct 2, which is generally the northeast quadrant of Milam County.

McKinney said the City of Cameron's official position as of March 1 on out-of-town fire runs with city trucks remains unchanged. The City plans to stop rural calls August 1.

The County Commissioners Court offered the City in a letter of June 5 $650 per year if city trucks would continue to make rural runs. They now receive $25 a run for all but grassfires.

The City had advised the County March 1 that unless payment of $1 per mile and $20 per hour for city equipment was made, City fire trucks would stop rural calls.

The City would have accepted instead an annual payment of $1,800 to continue the rural runs, based on previous years experience. But the Commissioners rejected both proposals.

County Judge O. B. Harden noted in the June 5 letter that 67 rural calls from July 1, 1964 to Dec. 31, 1966 for all types of fires "would have amounted to approximately $650 per year." This was the basis for the County offer.

McKinney said the exact service area of the Precinct 2 equipment will be determined at the July 11 meeting.

Men's Fashions Show More Attention To Detail, Accessories

COLLEGE STATION

Men's fashions have come into their own, says Miss Rheba Boyles, Extension clothing specialist at Texas A&M University. There is a new look -- more color, higher styling, more attention to detail and accessories.

England started the "mod" trend youthful Americans picked it up, and even conservative men's fashions have been influenced by the young London look. Some of the fashion features of this "look" include colors in everything, blazers and double breasted jackets, white collars and cuffs on colored and printed shirts, plushy cotton velour and wild paisley prints, trousers in fabrics with large scale plaids, and corduroy for every season.

A Total Look has become important and attention to coordination is now a must. This, says Miss Boyles, is another influence of affluence on the growing importance of grooming and appearance. Technology, too, plays its part in men's clothing. Durable press shirts and suits, and accessories of synthetic fibers go hand in hand with fashion, so that consumers have the best of two worlds --fashion and function.

The "mod" look includes a corduroy cap, flowered tie, solid colored shirt with a tapered body, a jacket with flap pockets and deep side vents, color-coordinated glen plaid durable press slacks with legs straight from the knees, large enameled cuff links, and black zip boots.

Fifty-five persons signed the register, coming from Waco, Little River, Buckholts, Alamo, Penelope, Maysfield, Hitchcock, Austin, the Cameron area and Shreveport, Louisiana.

Stay Order Law Said Misused By Unsafe Drivers

AUSTIN

One of the most devastating demons on Texas roads and highways and on city streets of this state has reared its ugly head, promiscously flaunting the law and endangering lives and propetries of Texas motorists.

Stay Orders, actually injunctions against the Department of Public Safety prohibiting it from "l.fting" (removing) driver's licenses and vehicles from the highways for traffic violations are becoming a common practice of getting around the law.

So states F. Darby Hammond, executive director of the Southwestern Insurance Information Service, headquartered in Austin.

Hammond said the Department of Public Safety records show that there are more than six thousand persons driving around without automobile liability insurance or enough money or assets to pay damages should they be involved in an accident.

"But these drivers are safe--with their judge-signed Stay Orders in their pockets," added Hammond.

According to DPS, the purpose of the Safety-Responsibility Act is to promote safe driving practices among ALL owners and operators of vehicles and to require by law that all such owners and operators be able to show financial responsibility to others for damages to persons or property when involved in mishaps on public highways of Texas.

Halmond said DPS issues about 10,000 suspensions every month. Over 500 of these, at least, he explained, become unenforceable because Stay Orders are permitted by the courts and never defended by the county attorney.

PROPER SCREENING

DPS has stated emphatically that their officials do not suspend anyone or remove any vehicle from the highway without just cause and without carefully screening the alleged violator.

Hammond says that citizens of the state are out millions of dollars each year for automobile damages --to say nothing of lives lost and personal injuries--used by holders of Stay Orders.

In addition, the public is paying dearly in tax money. If suspension of licenses by DPS are appealed in court, there are tax dollars and public officials' valuable time involved, plus unwarranted clogging of already-crowded court dockets.

Despite all DPS efforts, since inception of the Safety Responsibility Act, in 1952, said Hammond, flagrant grants of Stay Orders--issued by the very county judges sworn to uphold the laws of the state--the practice goes virtually uncontested and uncontrolled in some counties.

Most of Texas' 254 counties are not making a mockery of this law, and many have done a tremendous job of cleaning up such loop-hole practices, added Hammond.

"But in counties where Stay Orders are issued without the slightest attempt to enforce DPS suspension regulations, some lawyers are getting fat and rich on this legal-wheeling. Many attorneys charge up to $250 to keep an individual's license 'alive' -- no matter what the offense or what damages were done -- and some lawyers have so much business that they are mimeographing Stay Order forms," said Hammond.

In Houston recently a man was finally suspended after 32 traffic violations. He was allowed to drive under a Stay Order signed by a Harris County judge until he fatally injured a passenger in another automobile. One Harris County lawyer filed over 200 Stay Orders last year, according to DPS records.

Toward Summer Of '68

The idea of summer recreation sarely will receive a boost both from school and city.

The area of concentration would probably be in the Yoe Gym, Yoe Field and Yoe tennis court areas.

The old tennis courts could be properly redone and relined for use not only at tennis courts, but for volleyball and outdoor basketball. A good idea would be to build some backwalls for handball and tennis practice.

We are inclined to think of team sports as the most adaptable to keeping the most kids occupied. But how many will continue to play some team sports after they finish public school or even college?

Following this line, those sports that commend themselves to adult practice are as important as those team sports which serve the greater number in school age.

It is like the necessity of identifying both types of dropouts, the dull student and the bright, in order to understand all the problems of dropouts and needs of "special education."

Sports are a wonderful idea, but there are all kinds which are relatively inexpensive to teach and supervise. A good summer rec program can add a great deal to the established summer baseball fare.

WHAT OTHERS SAY . . .

Whole Cities Full Of Trash?

Garbage disposal may not be the most pleasant of editorial topics. But it is becoming one of the most urgent. There are more and more people, and each person produces more and more refuse. At the same time, space for dumping diminishes. Trash and ash used as landfill is, moreover fast eliminating remaining wetlands which serve as natural wildlife refuges.

Furthermore, cities have failed to construct enough giant incineration plants to handle the multiplying mountains of rubbish. The building of adequate plants of a type which do not themselves add to the equally ugly problem of air pollution is admittedly expensive. Yet this is so urgently needed that cities are going to have to fac squarely their responsibility.

Until additional, badly needed central incinerators can be built, New York City is considering the fascinating alternative of using refuse for, of all things, beautification. Debris would be shipped out of the city by rail and used to help fill in ugly, abandoned strip mines.

Turning from cure to prevention, much more can be done to attack the source of waste. Will the container industry, rapidly adding to the problem by its no-return bottles, its convenient, disposable cans, and its fancy cartons, have the foresight to take realistic steps to help find solutions? Or will it wait until government is forced to tell it it must, and how it must, as government already has had to do with industry contributing to air and water pollution?

It is now cheaper to consign abandoned automobiles and used cans, bottles, and papers to the junk heap than it is to reclaim them. Since aluminum cans resist burning, deterioration, and easy separating out, their use by the container industry is open to question. As for steel, glass, and paper, the least that concerned industries could do would be to work on ways to make reuse profitable. Until this is done, junk autos and just plain junk will continue to pile up and up and up.

Board Studies Air Pollution Law

By Vern Sanford
AUSTIN

After taking a look at the air pollution law just put on the books this year, members of the new Texas Air Control Board say the Texas law permits 80 times as much air pollution as do similar laws in some of the other states.

Elbert Hooper of Austin, the Board's attorney, told the directors that an exemption from control supposed to apply only to cotton gins (limiting air emissions to a maximum of eight percent of the process weight of any agricultural product) may exempt many industries.

He named the following as possibles: lumber mills, rice mills, grain elevators, paper mills, cotton oil mills, produce plants, food processing plants, citrus processing plants, cotton seed delinting plants, flour mills, soybean oil mills, corn syrup plants, slaughter houses, wool scouring plants, nut processing plants and, possibly, rendering plants.

"We might as well fold up and go home," said Board Member Henry LeBlanc of Port Arthur. "Maybe it would be easier for you to tell us what's left that we can control," he hold Hooper.

Some members observed that cotton gins would have to produce 50,000 to 60,000 micrograms of particulate matter to get to eight percent concentration -- and gins at best are not likely to exceed 40,000 to 50,000 micrograms.

Rep. Don Cavness of Austin and Sen. Criss Cole of Houston, coauthors of the 1967 Clean Air Act, say that the legislative intent was to exclude only cotton gins from State control. However, it may be necessary to amend the Clean Air Act in the 1968 special session to make this fact clear to industries which might want to be exempt.

ATTORNEY GENERAL RULES

Any applicant for a water well driller's license in Texas must have resided in the state for 90 consecutive days prior to his application, Atty. Gen. Crawford Martin has held.

In other opinions, Martin determined that:

—Department of Corrections may require return of a parole violator from New Jersey to serve the remainder of his sentence.

—New law didn't change requirements relating to specific affidavits on certain sworn accounts regarding claims, and the state comptroller can continue to issue warrants for properly submitted claims when such claims are submitted under affidavit.

—Terms of two former aeronautics commissioners expired last December 31. Terms of two more end next December 31. One is deceased, and a sixth will serve through 1970.

$$ FOR MENTALLY RETARDED

Deputy Commissioner Charles D. Barnett says the Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation has been allocated $18,400,000 in federal funds for the mental retardation program with another $1 million likely to be allocated.

Funds include grants-in-aid for care programs and grants for construction of new facilities.

THE COURT SPEAKS

Socony Mobil Oil Co., Inc. of Midland will have to bear the burden of a $167,789 judgment for damages to equipment owned by two New Mexico firms because the State Supreme Court has affirmed an appeals court decision. Damages resulted from an oil field fire which started while a Mobil well near Seminole, in Gaines County, was being acidized.

High court also ruled that an applicant who is denied a beer license may appeal in district court, but someone who protested granting of the license has no right to appeal.

A motorist's failure to appear in court when convictions for traffic violations are rendered against him does not protect him from Department of Public Safety suspension of his driver's license, Supreme Court ruled in a Midland County case.

A divorced mother temporarily committed to a mental hospital does not necessarily lose custody of her minor children, to the father, on her release. So says the high court in an Austin case.

Latter two verdicts both reversed lower court findings.

AMENDMENTS DRAWN

On November 11, Texans will vote on six proposed constitutional amendments placed on the ballot in this order:

No. 1 -- Allowing counties to put all tax money in a single general fund.

No. 2 -- Permitting cities and other governmental units within hospital districts to levy taxes for participation in mental health and mental retardation community centers.

No. 3 -- Reviving the veterans' land program and authorizing $400 million in bonds.

No. 4 -- Authorizing counties to pay medical, doctor and hospital bills for law enforcement officers injured in line of duty.

No. 5 -- Providing for a $75 million state parks revenue bond issue.

No. 6 -- Allowing state officers and employees to hold non-elective positions where there is no conflict of interest or where the state might benefit.

APPOINTMENTS

Three Texas fliers were named by Gov. John Connally to the State Aeronautics Commission: Hugh A. Fitzsimons Jr. of Carrizo Springs, William N. Allan of San Antonio and Rex Cauble of Denton.

Other appointments include:

Southern Regional Education Board: Dr. John A. Guinn of Denton.

House Speaker Ben Barnes reappointed Reps. Maurice Pipkin of Brownsville and Gus Mutscher of Brenham to the budget-writing board.

OIL ALLOWABLE RAISED

Texas oil allowable has been raised to 42.9 percent of potential in the wake of the Middle East Oil emergency.

At the same time, Texas Railroad Commission asked federal assurances that big oil producing states won't be left holding the bag of surplus inventories as they were in the 1957 Suez Canal crisis.

July allowable will be 3,412,042 barrels per day or 399,861 above the current level. Production figure in January, 1957, was 51.6 percent of potential.

WATER

Texas Water Rights Commission is studying the City of San Antonio's application for a permit to build a new lake to store 63,200 acre feet of water on Calaveras Creek.

Reservoir will contain a blend of run-off from the Calaveras rivershed and sewage effluent to be pumped out of the San Antonio River into the lake. Water would be used to cool a new electric generating plant slated to go into operation in 1972.

EDUCATION

About 400 experts, Texans and otherwise, are at work on 80 studies that will help piece together a master plan for education beyond high school in Texas.

Plan will be laid out in preliminary form next summer for a series of public hearings before finally adopted by the 18-member Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University system. Plan will chart the road ahead to 1985 for the public system of higher education.

OLD PHILOSOPHER

Dar editar:

I was out here on this Johnson grass farm the other morning with nothing to do, well that's not exactly true, I had plenty to do but it was too hot, and pulled out of earshot of the house and eased down under a tree and read an article I'd been saving from a newspaper I found on the road the day before. Country people are getting as sophisticated as city people, they drop newspapers when they get through with them, wherever they are.

This article was a sort of round-up by the Associated Press of what newspapers throughout the world thought of the summit talks between President Johnson and Premier Kosygin.

Included was what was thought by the New York Times, the Washington Post, the London Evening Standard, the Paris Gaullist Nation, Rome's Giornale d'Italia, Vienna's Express, Copenhagen's Berlingske Aftenavis, Stockholm's Aftonbladet, Tokyo's Asahi Shimbrun, and a lot more, but this is more than I can pronounce.

I do not understand this.

While I know The Herald doesn't have a full-time Washington correspondent, still if all he could report on was two men going in and two coming out without know ing what was said inside, it seems to the The Cameron Herald would have been on equal terms with the Scandinavian Aftonbladet or the New York Times.

What makes the Associated Press think The Herald can't guess just as wildly as The Aftonbladet?

Size is always confusing people, even the Associated Press, which didn't ask a single small town newspaper what it thought about the summit meeting. Big city newspapers have a tendency to get stuck up and take themselves too seriously sometimes, but I've never seen a weekly paper that couldn't make just as many typographical errors as a metropolitan daily, and a lot of the former have to do it short-handed.

As to what I think about the summit talks and whether any progress was made, I don't know, and couldn't unless I knew what they said. I saw the list of things they talked about, but that didn't let me know whether any progress was made. I've known women who have talked about the same people for years without making any progress.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

DIPLOMATIC POUCH

WASHINGTON D.C. The following letters were recently answered by the Department of State.

Domino Theory

I am attempting to follow the origin and development of the "domino theory" through the administration of President Eisenhower, Kennedy, and Johnson. I am therefore in need of any information relating to the above, and would greatly appreciate any assistance that you can give me.

T.D.W.
Tulsa, Oklahoma

Dear Mr. W:

As you may know, President Eisenhower used the domino simile in connection with Southeast Asia in response to a question asked at his news conference of April 7, 1954, concerning the strategic importance of Indochina to the free world. The President said:

". . . you have broader considerations that might follow what you would call the "falling domino" principle. You have a row of dominoes set up, you knock over the first one, and what will happen to the last one is the certainty that it will go over very quickly. So you could have a beginning of a disintegration that would have the most profound influences."

Since President Eisenhower made his remarks on the subject many other United States officials, including Secretary of State Rusk, Undersecretary of State George Ball, former Undersecretary of State Walter Bedell Smith, have referred to the "domino theory." You will find various such statements in the several Department of State publications containing documents on recent American foreign relations. These publications are described on pages 4 and 5 of the enclosed pamphlet entitled Major Publications of the Department of State."

Counsul in Dundee

My great-grandfather served as U.S. Consul at Dundee, Scotland, first appointed by President Lincoln and reappointed by President Grant on August 2, 1871. Would a search of your records indicate the address of the Consulate at the time of service of my great-grandfather? Does the United States presently have a Consulate at Dundee? If so, perhaps your Department would be kind enough to send the Consul a copy of this letter. If convenient we would enjoy a meeting with him in Dundee on April 28, 1967.

L.W. McD.
Cleveland, Ohio

Dear Mr. McD.:

The Consulate at Dundee was closed on February 29, 1940. The Consulate's records are now deposited in the National Archives. It is possible that these records mention the address of the Consulate at the time you ask about, although arrangements for Consulate offices were often made informally and not reflected in the official correspondence. You might write to the custodian of the Dundee files, the Diplomatic, Legal and Fiscal Branch, National Archives and Records Service, General Services Administration, Washington, D.C. 20402, on the chance that this information can be located.

Dundee is now in the consular district served by the Consulate General at Edinburgh. Should you wish to visit the Consulate General on your trip to Scotland, we suggest that you write directly to Mr. Paul DuVivier, American Consul General, 3 Regent Terrace, Edinburgh, Scotland.

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

By Vern Sanford

Although Texas is the largest of the 48 contiguous states, and has more open area, its federal camp grounds are few and far between.

This fact has just been brought to focus again in a National Park Service announcement of 571 campgrounds in 78 areas.

Only two National campground areas are listed in Texas -- Big Bend National Park, where there are three sites affording places to pitch tents and with modern conveniences at hand; and Padre Island, a new national park area, still in its primitive state.

There is room in the Big Bend area for something like 160 individual camps or tents.

Padre Island provides virtually unlimited area. Big problem is to reach the spots. Also there are no conveniences, not even fresh water.

According to all indications, this will be the heaviest year in camping history, with millions of persons taking to the open spaces.

All this camping will not be in tents. Deluxe trailers and truck campers will increase the comforts of the outdoors-seeking family.

Fortunately, the state of Texas owns about 40 camping areas. All have some facilities, including rest rooms and water connections.

Approximately half that number have shelters. But only a handful have sewer connections.

However, work now is under way through the help of the Outdoor Recreation program, to provide additional and modern facilities. Not only is this true in the case of state parks, but in many parks operated by counties, municipalities and river authorities.

Even with these added facilities there will be a shortage of camp grounds -- quite insufficient for everyone who might want to use them.

Tents were so thick at many of the parks last summer that the same pegs were used to tie down neighbor's tents. Bathing and toilet facilities were overtaxed.

Major facilities, such as those recently installed at Falcon, Garner State Park, Huntsville and others, will be on a reservation basis and short term duration to make room for the influx.

This is also true of U.S. Forest Service areas, where camping is allowed. If you don't believe these places fill hurriedly, just drive to one some weekend.

This year's situation will be improved some by individual landowners who will make their own small lakes and other desirable recreational facilities available. Some landowners who previously would never dream of having campers on their property are opening their gates this summer on a fee basis.

Quite a few landowners are finding that their income from recreation sites goes a long way toward paying taxes or helping to buy a new pickup. Fees ranging upward from 50 cents per day per family are being charged, depending upon what conveniences are available.

Mots of the major lakes in Texas, which once disdained travel trailer sites, now are turning to them. Excellent trailer accommodations are available at many of them. Most of these, however, are on a permanent basis.

Perhaps one of the most productive of all these is on South Padre Island, across from Port Isabel. Here Cameron County has provided literally scores of trailer pads. They are available to tourists on a weekly basis, or to long-time residents.

Other places like Rockport, Bay City, and the entire coast line between Galveston and Port Arthur, are lined with trailer sites that are privately owned, but available to the trailering public.

With this year's business expected to reach an all-time high, many other private landowners will be getting into the act before another season. Those with permanent water and other natural resources can develop a big business out of renting camping space.

What Cameron Means To Me

By Sharon Hanel

What does Cameron mean to me? It means my home town, the place where I was born and where I have spent all my life. It is the town where the people I know and love live, work, and play. It means a place where there are acres and acres of land available for people who want to come and live in Cameron. Cameron has room to spread out and become a larger city; and, although it may not be the largest town in Texas, it does not have the riots and protest marches that larger towns have. This means a lot to me because I know I can go where I want in Cameron without fear of being stopped in the streets by marchers or kept from the streets by protesters.

Cameron is also a place that has good churches and good schools. Cameron has many churches, and this is good in the fact that everyone can choose a place to worship without complaining that there isn't a church in Cameron that teaches his beliefs. Cameron has adequate schools available for all young people in Cameron. This means something, for schools are necessary for a good education; which is very much needed in our rapidly growing civilization. Good churches and schools help make the young people of tomorrow what they are and what they will be, and Cameron has both.

Cameron is a place where business is growing and with the help of the Industrial Foundation will continue to grow. It is a place where, with the help of the Industrial Foundation, job opportunities will be offered to men and women in Cameron. This means our young people will not go to other towns in search of better job opportunities. People will stay in Cameron. How is a town to grow without people? Cameron will not grow if people go out of town to shop, to go to movies or other places of recreation, and to find jobs. If Cameron businessmen are to profit from Cameron people, something must be done to attract them here. A town is what the people make it, and Cameron is a town that means very much to me.

However, the thing that means the most to me is the Cameron people themselves. These are the people who are always willing to help Cameron when a community project comes up. When Cameron people get together to raise money for a project, everyone responds and pitches in to make the project a success. These are the people who are always willing to help someone in need. If an individual or a family is hit by disaster, the people in Cameron rush to their aid. This means a lot to me, for I am assured that if something happen to me or my family, there will be someone to help. These people include the children as well as their parents. The young people of Cameron are also very willing to help when something comes up.

The conduct and appearance of the young people are reflected by their parents' attitudes, and Cameron parents have good attitudes. I am referring to the fact that wherever Cameron's young people go as a group on school trips, they are always complimented. One of my own experiences was on a trip to the State Capitol in Austin. The people were amazed that there wasn't sloppily dressed or rowdy person in the group. The House of Representatives even passed a resolution recognizing us for our conduct and appearance. This meant a lot to me and made me feel proud to be a part of Cameron and its people. This incident proved that the people of Cameron have respect for others and one another and the majority of the parents teach their children to be respectful and courteous.

Cameron means a lot to me. It is the place where I will always remember when I am in college. It wil be the place I'll look forward to coming home to. Cameron is where my roots are; where my family and friends are. It is my home.

ployment and that they don't invest enough in the hometown.

Some people always shop out of town: Cameron to Waco, Waco to Dallas, Dallas to New York, and New York to Paris for example. They always will. Cameron is raising industrial foundation money, street money, tax evaluations in school and city (moderately), airport money, library money. And people move once every three to four years in this country. It has become a common "malaise". The farm exodus is about complete.

We must accept the fact that community development is a competitive business. Most of all it requires realism and maturity.

Cameron's problems certainly did not accrue overnight, though many were too long ignored. There are few overnight solutions, though it appears a basic start is developing in just that comparative time.

What does Martin think about it?

When Martin is perplexed about a problem, and its solution is not found in a tree, or under a house or in a picture book, he changes hats.

Martin would say that Cameron has great shade trees, but you can't eat them. He would say there are a lot of nice playmates in town, but they don't buy the ice cream and knick knacks.

He would say diversify, work hardre at play, get more "moneys" from the adults and wander further into new neighborhoods.

And if that falls short, he changes hats.

TOWN and COUNTRY

CAMERON, TEXAS' HERALD, JULY 6, 1967 Page 1A

Research Program Is Helping "Big Business" Of Turfgrass

A Texas A&M University turfgrass research and education program is assisting the already "big business" of turf.

"And this big business is becoming recognized," Dr. George G. McBee, assistant professor of soil and crop sciences at Texas A&M, says. "Maintenance costs alone exceed $211 million a year in the industry."

A look at home lawns, schools, athletic fields, parks, golf courses, and other recreation areas will give some indication of why the industry is growing. Highway rights-of-way offer an area of expansion as new programs of beautification are undertaken.

Americans each year are discovering new vistas of recreation at local, county, state, and national park areas. With recreational interests and demands on the rise, the turfgrass industry is rapidly growing in this one area.

With the rise of this industry, Texas A&M has initiated a three point program of research, student instruction, and adult education, JcBee says.

Modern labs and field research plots have been acquired in order to conduct both basic and applied research.

A strain of bermudagrass suitable for use under certain conditions has been discovered to be more tolerant of lowlight. Research in herbicides, new varieties, fertilizers, and turf management is conducted to aid the turf grower in solving problems he may encounter.

Texas A&M offers three degrees, ranging from a B.S. to a Ph. D. to its students. For the graduates who plan a professional career in the turf industry, job openings exceed the available manpower.

The adult education program includes a field day and conference held annually on the A&M campus. The Turf Field Day will be conducted July 11 with the Texas Turfgrass Conference scheduled for December. Extension Service specialists aid the program by reaching out into the state with programs on turf management.

The objective of this research and education program, says McBee, is to help growers produce a beautiful turf with a minimum of time and money.

The kitchen is the heart of the modern home... and the flameless electric range is the heart of the modern kitchen.

If you are about to replace your present range, remodel your kitchen, or build a new home, talk to homemakers like Mrs. Ralph Poteet of Mesquite and learn first-hand of the many advantages of electric cooking.

Cameron, Buckholts, and Milano school districts have been invited to particiapte in the second annual Area School Bus Drivers Training Workshop at Blinn College, Brenham, on Thursday, August 24.

Statistics show, according to R. M. COUNTY AGENT'S NOTES

—By—

J. D. MOORE

A county crops tour has been set for July 12. All those interested in Milam agriculture should mark their calendars for this event. Merchants, fertilizer and seed dealers have a special invitation to attend. The group will leave from the Cameron Post Office at 7:30 a.m. July 12. The tour should be completed by noon.

Farmers to be visited are: Joe P. Mueck, Frank Kratochvil, Hugo Aigner, Eugene Klein, Leonard Pelzel, Doyal Arnold and Wilburn Beckhusen. Things to be seen on the tour: irrigation, trace mineral test, cotton and maize variety test, chemical weed control in cotton and maize.

Soil samples on 13 farms, representing a wide area of soils in the county, were sent to a soils lab and tested for available amounts of Magnesium, sulphur, manganese, ferric iron, copper, zinc, and boron. All samples were low in all of the trace minerals, except magnesium. This list of trace minearls was added by way of crop demonstrations. The response of each of these trace minerals show no visual increase in production. However, we hope to have two maize test weighed by the date of the tour.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL • ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

The rose comes very close to man's standard of perfection. Its delicate beauty seems to mock every effort of the artist or camera to capture it.

But is the rose really God's masterpiece? Hardly!

For its beauty is passive. It brightens life only for those who seek it out and gaze upon it. And in but a few days it withers and is ugly.

God's masterpiece is MAN. For with all his waywardness and selfishness, Man is capable of reflecting the love of God. When he lets God touch his life he is able to bring happiness and faith to others. He doesn't have to wait until he is noticed. He can actively bring spiritual blessings to his fellow men.

As the gardener cultivates the rose, the Church cultivates the lives of men. Always it strives to help us become all that God wants us to be.

Chisholm Trail Centinnial

Early Cattle Drives Recalled

The Chisholm Trail was born of desperation -- typical of this desperation was the plight of George F. Hindes, whose father was a pioneer rancher on the San Miguel. Young George was 17 when the Civil War broke out and he volunteered.

He left behind a "nice little stock of gentle breeding cattle and a good bunch of horse stock. When I got out of the Army in the spring of 1865, our cattle and horses were all stolen or scattered to the four winds and we were broke."

He had company. All Texas was broke.

About the only thing Texas had in quantity was cattle. Charles Goodnight gave the best description of the situation:

"Cattle in the east pushed cattle into Central Texas; cattle in the heart of the state crowded cattle to the western line of the Cross Timbers where the wild Kiowas and Comanches stopped progress. As years went on these herds multiplied until cows swarmed from border to border.

"From being a source of pleasure they grew to be a burden. In time they dominated the state which became cattle-minded, cattle-ridden. Cows stood belly-deep in grass; cows cooled themselves in low-banked streams; cows chewed cud in the shade of the trees; cows ran wild and free, too unrestrained and too numerous for accurate numbering and branding.

"Ranchmen tended them, branded them, tried to keep them under surveillance, but with no ultimate end in view. Cattle lived, produced more cattle, that in turn brought more cattle into the world and yet there seemed to be no reason for their perpetuation. Ranching became almost a matter of habit with men, not a means to an end. They took care of the cattle because cattle were there, not that they had an end in view."

Goodnight amply explained the situation. Cattle everywhere and no market.

Then Joseph McCoy, a young Illinois stockman, persuaded the Union Pacific Railroad to build a railhead with loading facilities in Abilene, Kansas. McCoy began building a hotel and other facilities for drovers and their herds.

McCoy also hired Tim Hersey to survey a route from Texas to Abilene. Included in this survey was the wagon trail laid out by Jesse Chisholm on his trading expeditions to the Indian nations. In time, the entire route became known as the Chisholm Trail.

Late in the summer of 1867, the first herd arrived in Abilene and the drives were on. Before they ceased in the 1880's, more than ten million cattle "went up the trail." This was the largest movement of animals under the control of man known to the history of the world.

The average-size herd numbered about 3,000 head -- this was the most cattle that could still be easily handled. Generally, it took one man with ten horses for each 300 head of cattle.

One cowboy said, "Death came in a hundred forms." There were storms, stampedes, indians, outlaws, and prairie fires.

No matter, it was a hard life for those who "went up the trail." One old-time cowboy, W. B. Hardeman of Devine, recalled:

"I have seen the time when I would have given $5 for a half hour's sleep. I would even put tobacco in my eyes to keep awake. Our regular work was near 18 hours a day, and 24 if we had a bad night. And most of us were getting only $30 a month and grub....."

L. D. Taylor of San Antonio said, "I have seen cowboys who has been in the saddle for 24 hours without sleep or anything to eat come into camp, lay down on a log and go to sleep isntantly and sleep soundly with the rain pouring down and water four inches deep all around....."

More often than not it was stampedes that kept the cowboys in the saddle endless hours. No one knew what it would take to upset the herd and turn it into a thundering bellowing sweep of destruction moving across the prairies, trampling everything in its path.

The flare of a match, as a cowboy bent to light a pipe, caused one stampede. A black wolf getting too near a herd on another occasion set it on the run. A greenhorn just along for the ride, triggered a stampede when he fell asleep and his horse wandered in the herd.

Stampedes were frightening and an experienced trail driver said anybody who wasn't scared was a liar.

After a stampede, one cowboy emerged with a bruise over his right eye. He claimed one of his buddies had stepped on him. On close examination, it was proven that the bruise really came when the cowboys ran into the spindle of a wagon axle. Verdict: the wagon became frightened and ran over the cowboy.

Indians and outlaws caused their share of stampedes but probably the thing that caused the most, and had cowboys saying more prayers than anything else, was electrical storms. Such storms were awesome, wonderful and killers.

Oldtimer M. A. Withers of Lockhart ercalled lightning striking while he and G. B. Withers were delivering a herd to Gus Johnson: "It (the lightning) set Johnson's undershirt on fire and his gold shirt stud, which was set with a diamond, was melted and the diamond was never found. His hat was torn to pieces and mine had all the plush burned from the top. I was not seriously hurt, but G. B. Withers lost one eye ....."

G. W. Mills of Lockhart noted: "Near Ogalala, we had the following varieties of lightning, all playing close at hand, I tell you. It first commenced flash lightning, then came forked lightning, then came lightning followed by a peculiar blue lightning. After that show it rapidly developed into ball lightning which rolled along the ground. After that, spark lightning, the most wonderful of all. It settled down on us like a fog. The air smelled of burning sulphur. You could see it on the horns of the cattle, the ears of the horses and the brims of hats."

Cowboys would customarily shuck their spurs and six-guns when lightning began to flash.

Hail was another dread enemy. Jagged ice would lash down, on occasion with gunshot velocity. Jack rabbits would be killed and even small antelope. One crew remembers that hail literally peeled a bald cowboy.

There were tornados too -- L. D. Taylor headed for Texas from Abilene, was caught in a tornado the second night out. He wrote: "It was one of those Kansas zephers that was calculated to blow hell off the range. I located a stump and anchored myself to it, while the boss, a long-legged fellow, had secured a death grip on a sapling.

Swollen rivers also had to be crossed. Taylor told of cattle swimming the Brazos at Waco: "It was a wonderful sight to see 1,000 steers swimming all at one time. All you could see was the tips of their horns and the ends of their noses as they went through the water."

Bart Kelso of Pleasanton was on the long trek with 3,400 two-year-old steers to Humbolt Wells, Nevada. Their horses gave out. The outfit walked most of the last 500 miles, but they delivered the herd.

Indians gave their share of trouble. The big danger was to the lone cowboy, hunting strays, who was unlucky enough to run into a few Indians. The odds were right for the Indians. If he didn't have a fast horse, the cowboy died.

But much of the time the Indians were more of a nuisance than a menace, coming into camp and asking for "wohaw" (beef).

Indians rode up to a young Texan making his first trip up the trail, and greeted him: "How, John?" The youth was amazed. After the Indians left, the Texan -- whose name was John Williams -- sought out a friend. "Those damned Indian sknew me and I never saw the damned fools before!"

John Williams was hoorahed about that for a long time before he was told that the expression was a stock Indian greeting.

Farmers on occasions, would harass the drovers with prairie fires. It should be pointed out, however, that some farmers had legitimate claims for damages.

A trampling herd of Longhorns could do a powerful lot of damage to an unfenced crop. There were no trees for fences nor barbed wire which didn't appear on the scene until the 1870's -- and then it was expensive.

Sometimes the drovers were welcomed. One cowboy recalled two women fighting over where a herd should be bedded down. The women were looking for surface-coal (cow chips) to be used for fuel on the treeless plains.

Then there was the farmer who approached the trail boss and asked if he might have any calves born before the herd moved on. Although all trail bosses didn't follow the rule, it was the common practice to kill all such calves on the theory that the animals would be too weak to keep up.

"Sure," the trail boss said, "if you'll stand a night's watch, you can have all the calves you can find tomorrow morning."

The granger stood watch. There were no calves the next morning. The cowboys were driving steers.

That was rather typical of the cowboy whose humor might be as rough as his life.

Also a story is told on a snobbish Kentuckian who showed up on a drive and whose sneering references to the cowboy's lack of so-called social graces caused the boys, as J. D. Jackson put it, "to show him how they did things in high cow-camp society."

He wore a blue shirt, so the cowhands told him solemnly that Inidans always sniped at a blue shirt first on the theory that the wearer was a soldier.

Several gravely warned him about "gwinders", a vicious man-eating animal that had short legs on one side so it could circle a mountain at full speed and pounce on a man.

At a campfire one night, 60 miles south of Marfa, the cowboys spun their most gruesome Indian tales. The Kentuckian was impressed and was uneasy when he took to his bedroll.

One Dan Knight roused the Kentuckian after midnight and said the remuda had to be moved closer to camp because of Indians. The pair had no more than reached the horses when a dozen whooping warriors -- cowboys with bunches of grass tied to their heads -- charged.

Knight fell, shouting that he was mortallywounded and urging the Kentuckian to escape.

Nine hours later, the Kentuckian sounded into Marfa on a lathered horse shouting that he was the lone survivor of an Indian raid.

Yes, cowboys could play rough, but this was only a reflection of the hard life they faced moving cattle up the Chisholm Trail.
